Among all models, the MARS model (Multivariate Adaptive Regression Splines) provided the most accurate predictions for degree attainment.

In two-year institutions, students who borrow loans for college are more likely to attain a degree whereas the likelihood for those who use savings is negative.

In four-year institutions, the Work-Study program has positive impact on degree completion.